NO. 21 VOL. 5

The City Is Our Campus

The Globe: Alias

On December 23,1970, two students, formerly with the SAC controlled Globe, and a counsellor proposed continuing the Globe in a letter to the The president responded by subsidizing the paper initially at the rate of $400 per month. The paper was to be independent and to serve all facets of the college. The initiators proposed a StandingCommittee as described in the letter; this suggestion was not acted upon setting a pattern for initiative to originate with the paper staff. Initially it was agreed the editor should be a student but a succession of student editors in the initial months demonstrated the instability of this situation and eventually the counsellor became editor. Additional revenues for the paper were to be secured from advertising though results of efforts in this direction were slow to materialize. Again initial reliance on student help did not prove reliable and an outside agency was engaged inSeptember 1971. At the same time the paper went on a weekly bais to improve its value as an advertising vehicle and its newsworthiness

INNOVATIONS

To save costs, increase involvement and employ skills learned in the college the paper undertookits own composition and layout. Later on the paper rented equipment from IBM to improve the typeface and layout though the output of this equipment did not prove satisfactory and increasing reliance has been placed upon Graphic Arts resources thanks to the cooperation of the chairman of this department.

COLLECTION PROBLEMS

During the fall of 1971 the competence and credit worthiness of the advertising agent became most doubtful factors. This, plus tardiness in college subsidy payments, forced the paper into an overdraft position with the bank in order to meet obligations, particularly payroll. By year end a $1,000 overdraft existed and finally a submission to the president for a grant to retire debt, provide working capital and offset a projected deficit in 1972 was made The response of increasing the subsidy to $587.50 per month did not, in fact, meet the terms of the request for the grant.

IMPROVEMENT IN REVENUE

At the same time relations were terminated with the advertising agent. and a permanent sales manager employed. There has been a marked improvement in billings and collections but the time lag between billing and collection has imposed a further strain on working capital. Also an additional investment in space has proved necessary to accomodate the advertising further raising costs.

PEOPLE MUST BE PAID

Another factor has emerged, although it is reasonable to continue with voluntary help on the editorial side of the paper, students cannot afford to spend time on the production side, employing skills learned in the college, depending as most of them do on part time employment to see them though college. Also, if the paper is to have a nucleus of a permanent staff, it becomes a necessity of life that they have year-round employment. This would seem compatible with a college having a round enrol ment of students.

GOOD IMAGE VITAL

Then, as the Globe increases in circulation and readership and becomes increasingly used as a vehicle for communication both within and without the college, its appearance becomes important. Improvement in this area requires skills and techniques that must be expected to cost money.

Finally and this is quoted from the submission to the pressident: " the paper is being produced with the aid of a bank overdraft guaranteed by the editor, a school counsellor who receives no material henefit from the paper ..

Committee Investigates Internal Com munications

Today at 2 p.m. the president's committee meets at MacPherson Campus to, in the words of Jim Turner, "look at the Globe as an internal communications medium and, in addition, the whole question of internal communications within the college." Mr. Turner will convene the committee, see that it selects a chairman then leave it to proceed with its assignment. It will be up to the committee, Mr. Turneradvises, to decide whether its proceedings will be open or closed and whether individuals submissions will be made to it.

Members of the committee are as follows:

George Carere - faculty, Kensington

Tom Jollie - student, Casa Aileen Kelson - middle

Teraulay Diane Parsons - support staff, Casa Loma

Fran Scrutton - student, Teraulay

Malcolm Sykes - senior administration, Kensington

LEO LI WINS COOK-OFF

Leo Li, a George Brown College apprentice sponsored by the Royal York Hotel, was the winner in a"cook-off" among nine contenders held last Friday in the Food Technology Department at Kensington Campus.

Leo then becomes one of three back up men assisting the four Canadian Chefs on our national Culinary Olympics team. The team will compete for the world championship in Frankfurt, Germany this October in the International Culinary Olympics.

The contest was sponsored by the Escoffier Club of Toronto and the Provincial Government's industrial training branch of the Department of Labour Contendors in the contest came from Ottawa's Algonquin College and George Brown College.

The Strategy Of Silence

In Paris the Vietnam peace talks may get under way again and today at MacPherson Campus the president's committee investigating, in particular, theGlobe and, generally, internal college communications convenes. Individual members of the committee may have to do a lot of catching up to be abreast of the situation. It ishopedthat they will be able to proceed with greater dispatch than the peace talks - for, unless the Globe staff can reach out to new dimensions of initiative and ingenuity, the committee may find a corpse on their hands. And in this summer heat corpsescan become most unsavoury

Actually what the committee's terms of referenceare all about is the subject of communications, generally recognised as weak in this college, though we are probably not unique, we wish them well in their endeavours. Poor communications broach strategies of eilence which in turn can lead to paralysis of decision.

And should the Globe pass out of existence we are left with bulletin board posters, instructions to the effect "Please ensure that the following items are read to the class" and notices on Loo-house walls, official or otherwise.

NOTICE

As a result of last Wednesday's Student Council meeting, at Teraulay Campus, nominations are once again invited for a campus-wide election to take place in June, after time for campaigning.

Class representatives are urged to encourage full participation.

Look out for a special memorancum as soon as the Returning Officer has been appointed.

College Campus and was received by Mr. Ferguson. The recipients were very impressed and pleased. After the formalities the chairs etc were cleared away and the party began. The food was superb, expecially a cake which was well made. Rachelle Blanchard played her guitar and there was dancing. Music was also supplied by Jerry Brown and Harvey Labelle.

HURRY HOME - THE POT'S BOILING

THE MAIL BOX

Dear Sir:

It was with a funny feeling that I read about the comment made by one of the students about a 'little old man with a broom' who comes around cleaning the floors during lunch-hours.

I wonder if these students ever wonder why he is there. I have seen countless times when students butt their cigaretts on the floors rather than in the ash-trays (pardon methe old soup cans) provided for them. How many times do the students leave empty paper cups, plates and empty bags and other refuse on the tables rather than walk a few steps to refuse cans provided all around the cafeteria. In a way I wonder if this action is beneath their dignity and I must admit my occasional guilt of this matter.

Let me point out that the cafeteria is kept much cleaner than some of the one I have had the pleasure of dining in (if one can call it dining after tripping over garbage on the floors.).

over garoage on the Hoors.).

Have you ever wondered what goes into cleaning of a cafeteria It isn't just sweeping of the floors but the many hours put into scrubbing, rinsing, waxing and all the other jobs that are required to keeping a place in good

Every day one hears people say we must do something about pollution so what better place to start than take a few minutes to clean our tables after we have finished our lunch.

STAND UP BOY-SPEAK UP!

It was a helava good feeling to read in the Globe that some Teraulay students protested the appointment of S.A.C. executives by the unsuspecting rubber stamping herds of class representatives.

It seems peculiar how this GRAND STUDENT ELECTION fell short of expectations. The impression was created by weeks of publicity that the halls of Teraulay were about to be transformed into such a mature state that student elections were to make place. Alas-our hopes were dashes-an election, the Real Thing was not to happen.

What happened? Can anyone enlighten the Great Unwashed?

MUSINGS

LLOYD C. BOWEN

Some early summer notes.

When the CBC production of Jalna started some months back I was quite eager to see what it had to offer. There was to that mysterious quality called 'Canadian content' and I was truly interested in trying to discover what it was really all about. I had seen stompin' Tom Conners at the Mariposa Festival last summer; listened to Anne Murray and Gord Lightfoot and these were and are 'Canadian content'.

Jalna proved a disappointment after the third episode. I began to wonder what it was all about; where it was leading, why all the flashbacks, couldn't the story have started at the beginning and move forward in time to the present, and so forth. I imagine that a producer working on a large and unwieldly script like de la Roche's has problems on his hands. Basic ones, that is. But the producer can also do his own thing so to speak and so put together whatever type of material he is working with to suit the best interest not only of himself and his colleauges but also of the viewing public. The CBC's decision to kill the remaining series is no doubt sound I would say that the financial consideration is at any rate paramount in this decision, but I think that in general the whole thing failed to go places and what a pity. Canadian content could really have been given a boost in the arm. Maybe now we should look forward to seeing Margaret Laurence's books under the television camera. Then pernaps, too, the conquest of Quebec or Riel's Rebellion, would make delightful viewings. Meanwhile we'll be looking forward to seeing Pierre Berton's Railway

C.H.G.B TOURS RADIO YORK

On Friday May 26th, several students of the staff of C.H.G.B. made a 3 hour visit to York University and called on the studios and offices of Radio York. They were greatly impressed with the studio set-up.

The G.B.C. students then spent an hour at a seminar discussing programme production and planning with the staff of Radio York.

It was also mentioned by the Assistant Production Manager of Radio York that the radio station started in the basement laundry room. They now have 3 offices, 3 studios and a record library room. That gave the staff of C.H.G.B. hope of what to look forward to in the future.

OOPS!

We sincerely, deeply and humbly regret any inconvenience, embarrasment or other disability to Mr. Emmett McHugh when we inadvertently misspelled his name. We have no excuse and trust all is forgiven.

Here are some figures to boggle your already crowded mind. They are taken from a private survey my assistants and I recently conducted on the Teraulay campus.

35 per cent of all women (on the campus) wear hot pants. 8.6 per cent wear jeans; 12.23 slacks, 22 per cent drink coke , 18 per cent ginger ale, 29 per cent drink coffee before ten in the morning. 36.75 per cent buy hot lunches at midday, 24.6 buysandwiches and other cold foods; 21.5 bring their own lunch and the rest don't buy anything at all anyt 43.76 wear bring clothing. The colours listed in order of preference: red, blue, green, pink, yellow, brown and white. 53.3 per cent smoke of these 46 per cent smoke filtered brands; a low percentage (0.023) roll their own, smoke cigars or chew tobacco.

27 per cent drive cars. 23 per cent get rides to and from the campus, 68.92 per cent take the transit four or five times a week. 4.10 per cent ride bikes.

74.08 per cent read the Globe; 88.76 per cent read musings more than once since coming to the college campus.

42.36 per cent want to be secretaries; 39.02 typists; 28 per cent bookkeeping clerks and a further 18.32 per cent accountants. 89.7 per cent accountants. 89.7 per cent spent too much time in the cafeterias and the rest goof off completely.

II.7 per cent read one book a week; 4.2 two books a week; .76 three a week.

43.8 consume more than ten pints of beer at one sitting; 34.3 six and a half pints at two sittings; another 28.17 per cent less than four pints at a sitting. Their favourite is draft.

The average number of children is 4.378 per woman student studied.

CANADIAN HOME WINEMAKING

Finally, we have come to price. It is an important factor, but only for a minority the only factor. It allows Canadians to drink wine much more often. Even in an age of relative affluence there are few who can afford a $3.00 bottle with every lunch and dinner But a few gallons of wine in the basement or kitchen does allow a family to have it more often-and when they fancy it."

Årthurs' organization has five Wine-Art stores in Toronto and one in London. His partner, the President of the National Canadian operation, Stan Anderson, operates, controls or franchises some 20 odd additional stores from Vancouver to the Maritimes. This hobby has become so popular that Wine-Art in Ontario alone has an additional 100 outlets who buy Wine-Art equipment and ingredients on a wholesale basis for resale.

The fact that price cannot be the only factor in homemade winemaking in the Seventies, is shown by the people who make it. They are by no means only members of the low to middle income groups. Doctors, lawyers, engineers, architects-there are hundreds of these customers of Wine-Art stores today, delighting in their new-found hobby.

Price cannot be the only criterion for this new surge-how otherwise explain the formation of wine clubs, where members get together to compare products, ecipes, and working methods. There are plenty of these too, cropping up across Canada. People today travel a lot more than that ten miles of the early prioneer to compare notes on a sweet, sparkling wine or the suear content of a red.

There are many reasons for the rowing interest in making wine.

First, it stems from an enjoyment in drinking wine. This is comparatively new for many Canadians. A different "climate" for drinking, the influx of Europeans in the post-war years, travel by Canadians to countries where wine is the common drink, an increased desire for social drinking (as opposed to getting drunk) are all reasons for the tremendous growth in wine-drinking.

Sales growth of commercially produced wine in Ontario, for instance, has averaged over 8 per cent for each of the past several years. The manufacture of homemade wines has jumped even more.

For Canadians soon found they not only loved drinking it; they loved more being able to say, "That's a good wine and I made it."

In an era of increased specialisation, growing concentration in urban areas, a certain remoteness with the soil, and perhaps what are vaguely termed the simpler things of life, Canadians have turned to winemaking to satisfy an urge to create something that is individual and, at the same time, pleasing to the eye, the nose and mouth.

Very few, much as they might like to,can say "I made this pair of shoes", or "this suit is made from material I weaved", but tens-of-thousands can now claim to have made the bottle of wine they drink.

And, when they lift the glass to their lips, it is a moment of great satisfaction, much like that the early pioneer who created this country knew.

A BROWN STUDY

At a recent public hearing on higher education a university English department chairman expressed concern about the new system of optional school subjects allowing students to drop English.

drop Engish.

By September, 1972 all Ontario
Secondary schools will be operating on a credit system as outlined in Section A of a 1969 regulation. A student must complete 27 credits for a graduation diploma, with a minimum number of these credits falling into four broad subject fields. This means the student has considerably more flexibility is good, and part of our adjustment to today's premissive society.

We then hear the dangerous westion. "Why study English?" From the student who probably needs it most. He bases his selection on the sound but misread principle of considering interests, aptitude and objectives.

He may not see that such a choice may contribute to his drop of literacy. This means he may have to settle for a less rewarding objective in the years ahead. Ultimately he may have to take a special remedial course in language and communication to make up a crippling deficiency, or go through life with a crutch such as "you know what I means". He may not amuse his listener when he becomes notorious for his ridiculous misuse of words in the tradition of Mrs Malaprop and Archie Bunker. He may put clothes on a manifold and a gasket on a manikin, for which he has our sympathy. He has already read a book, and didn't like it.

Sometimes the community college student may ask "why do I have to take language & communication?," Why should we continue to study English in a community college, in adult education, in our continuing education program?

One should learn to read and write better simply to help us understand and communicate best in everything we undertake, at school and at home and at work. For the rest of our lives. Non-stop.

REPORT ON READERSHIP SURVEY OF THE GLOBE By Doug Frickelton

> Three weeks ago, The Globe ran asurvey form on the last page. The purpose of the survey was to obtain the opinions of students, faculty, administration and support staff about many aspects of this newspaper.

The total number of student's forms returned came to 590

The college wide support staff returned 92 completed forms while 167 faculty members and 53 members of the administration responded.

The complete total of forms returned was 1902.

In answer to the question, "How often do you pick up copies of the Globe?", it is interesting to note that 4I per cent of all college students said "occasionally", while 4I per cent of the support staff, faculty and administration stated they pick up every issue. At the same time, 17 per cent of the students checked the number saying they never read the Globe. Only 4 per cent of the support staff, faculty and administration said they didn't read the Globe.

The question "How much of the paper do you read?", brought the students and the support staff, faculty and administration even with their answers. Both groups totalled 59 per cent in saying they read some of the paper. OUT AND ABOUT

by wally

Big things are happening in the Casa Loma area. All you guys around there don't have to bother with the long trip downtown arymore. The Davenport Dupont Corner is opening up. The latest thing is the Dupon Street Auditorium. It's got everything you can get downtown at small town prices. With a jug of beer 75 cents to a dollar cheaper than the strip charges, plus in most cases, better entertainment, it's got to be the best deal in town.

I was there for the opening last Thursday and have never had a better time. Aaron & Space with Lisa Garber were on. This group is over it's growing pains and now have got it together. They were good enough to get an invite back. This week ASA is putting out. They make a different noise—interesting enough to make it worth your while.

Oh, one more thing, some of the people on the dance floor should never wear hot pants again, but they got off as much as the rest. It's just another way to say this thing is for everybody. It's decent.

MORE OF ANTIGUA

All that remains of the great house at Crabbs 200 years ago a grand bail was in full swing, elegant ladies, dashing young men, chaperones, flunkeys and the string quartet were enjoying the evening when, with a blood thirsty scream the Caribs attacked. Within 15 minutes not a man, woman or child was left alive only the echoes of the slaughtered fiddlers of Crabbs could still be heard, as they can be heard even to this day.

Visitors to English Harbour and Nelson's Dockyard swear they can hear the rattle of sabres, the clump of a peg leg on a wooden deck and the echoes of sea chanties even though it's been 200 years since it was the headquarters for the British Caribbean Fleet.

ne Great Outdoors

If you've ever longed to do a John Wayne riding majestically into the sunset, or gallop along the sands at sunrise on a pure white stallion as shown in the old cigarette commercials, the make Summer of '72 your year of the horse. Riding is a marvellous way to enjoy the great outdoors and it's good extra those ones around the stomach and thighs you didn't know you had until they ache.

Having decided you want to ride this

Having feelded you want to ride this summer you must now decide whether you want to learn to ride or merely sit on a horse for some meandering through the countryside.

If you want to learn, then go to a stable that teaches with a British saddle and where lessons advance you through hunt, jump and dressage. You can also that the saddle then go to a ranch where they ride Western style. There you sort of teach yourself how to stay on, then at a later stage you can learn to rope and all later stage you can learn to rope and all later stage you can learn to rope and all the other things they do on ranches.

Now to find your stable. You could check through the yellow pages and choose some you like the names of and drive out to see them. If you decide to drive out to see phem. If you decide to be aware of, for your own protection and to assure you're in a good stable.

Ask to see through the stables. Are they clean, well kept? Good house-keeping and good horse-keeping and set, are they touchable? Are the het you chable? Are the stable get inspected regularly by the plaque? Are the stable boys friendly and helpful? Do you like and trust the instructor? Watch a class and see how he operates. operates, besides.

Or you could start with our list, because we've done all that. We've also checked with Muriel Lennox, editor of Canadian Horse-which when your horsey you'll subscribe to-and the Canadian Horseshows Association.

Within easy reach of Toronto, here are some of the better riding stables and rambes. We normally don't include club in our features, but because there dues and supprior facilities, we've included two of the best. Phone for directions on how to get to these places, and for an appointment.

Chinguacousy Country and Riding Club, Caledon. (1-838-3903) Lt. Col. Michael Cutowski, is the head man here, and he is particularly proud of the facilities offered by the club-two indoor and outdoor arenas, jumps, hunt course, swimming pool; tennis courts and golf. The quality of horsemanship taught is high—but so are the prices. Initial membership is $300 for a family and annual due to f $310, single members pay $160 dues of $310, single members pay $160 dues of $310, single members pay $160 dues of $300, single members pay $160 dues of $300 group and $45,50 dues of $300 group and $5,500 private with other instructors. In addition they charge $2 an hour for the rent of a school horse. It is possible to take tion they charge 32 an nout not net rent of a school horse. It is possible to take group lessons of 10 for $65 or 25 for $125, plus of course, horse rent. They reluctantly board non-members' horses for $90 a month, if you're a member it costs you only $55 a month.

Pine Ridge Equestrian Centre, Valley Farm Road, Pickering. (839-4532) Helga Degen probably has the best idea for teaching horsemanship to children. She operates a children's club for $400 a operates a children's club for $400 a year, and for an additional $40 a month they receive two lessons a week and spend as much time as they wish on and with the horses. For adults, Miss Degen leases you a horse for $100 a month, entitling you to four riding lessons and as much time as you want to spend with your horse of the month. This seems to make a lot of sense.

Metro Farms, Maple (832-1366) Their main aim is to teach you enough riding so that you enjoy it and feel comfortable on a borse, with maybe a little elementary jumping. Definitely not a competitive stable. Private lessons with Grant Calder or Jim Tackaberry are S8 an hour, or group $6. This stable is not recommended for very young children, say under 12. They don't have the smaller saddles to accommodate them. You can rent a horse here for $3 an Metro Farms, Maple (832-1366) Their You can rent a horse here for $3 an hour, provided you know how to ride, and they board at $50 a month.

Valhalla Riding School, Richmond Hill (884-1322) Owned and operated by Manfred Hundert who also gives to the horsemanship course at Humber Col-lege. He has an indoor arena and two outside rings, plus a cross-country outside rings, plus a cross-country course, Hundert believes you'll comfort-ably ride a horse after ten weeks, Lessons for beginners are private for the first month at $36 for four, then $25 a month to board your horse, which includes use of the school's facilities, Valhallal also has a summer camp at Gananoque, and the rate is $120 per week. This includes room and board, pleasant way of taking a crash course.

Eglinton Equestrian Club, Thornhill (889-6375) This junior club has strict rules for both horses and members. It also has an exceedingly high standard of also has an exceedingly night standard or horsemanship. At one time they had the best pony club in Ontario but that has now been disbanded into regular junior classes. Head instructor is Michael Herbert who has the use of fifty-five horses. You can't board your own steed here unless you've been riding here for three or four years and the animal has to be approved. For juniors, there's an initial joining fee of $100 and annual dues of $25. Lessons are $32 for four. Seniors may become associate members at $30 annually, lessons $8.50 each. Juniors boarding horses must take out a $500 investment debenture.

Central Don Stables Riding School, Sunnybrook Park (445-7337) This is Sunnybrook Park (445-7337) This is where the police stables are. It is also one of the largest riding schools in North America. They have more than 600 students, the youngest is 4% and the eldest 83. All the instructors, includate the stables of the stable stables are supported by the stables of the stabl

JUST TALKING

GO FLY A KITE!

by Tim Dineen

Kim is a friend of mine. She's more than a friend, she is almost a daughter to me. . She is four

Across the street from Kim's apartment is a great big empty lot. Next year they are going to have a school, or something of that nature, to replace the lot. Other lots grow weeds this one grows a school?

All clear so far?

Well, it so happens that Kim, her mother and I went shopping one day and Kim saw this huge thing high up in the air.

"Whats that thing?", she

"That is a kite", I informed.

"Will you buy me one?" she asked, her eyes glancing up in a silent plea. The eyes had it. see." I stated, but I knew I was caught because I wanted to have as much fun as those kids who were flying theirs.

Years ago, I tried to build my own kite. It was a project that ended in utter failure. The wood was too heavy, the string was too thick and the paper was that evenings sport section, a fact still vaguely remembered by a few brothers of mine.

To make a long story short, it wouldn't fly. This experience gave me the bright idea of purchasing Kim's kite.

This thing is suppossed to resemble a sting-ray, except for its blue and yellow colouring It also has two flaming red eyes with black pupils, I guess it is supposed to look scary but I am not in the least afraid of it, nor is Kim.

Along with the kite 1 purchased some string. It came on what looked like an attempt to make a fishing rod. A handle, a reel and no rod. It looked like a good idea when I bought it; but, it had no way of channeling the string onto the spool in a nice, orderly fashion. The string piled up on its own or, if you didn't watch it, it would get caught around the winding handle and get stuck

The big day finally came for us to test our kite on its soaring ability. Out we went, across the street to the vacant lot. My first indication of any problems we would have come to me when I noticed that there was little or no wind.

I told Kim that I would try to get the kite up in the air and then hand over the string to her. Trying to get the kite in the air consisted of holding on to the string with onehand, the "reel" in the other hand; the hand with the string held well over my head, and running like an olympic torch bearor over the ruts and bushy clumps for about seventy five yards. This manoeuver had the sting ray soaring about fifty feet over my head. Now, all I had to do was hand the string over to my four-year old accomplice. She was back where I had started from. I couldn't go back. The wind, what little I had, was in my favour only if 1 ran away from her. She had to come to me.

"Kim!" I screamed, "Come on, grab the string!" Meanwhile, 1 ran in ever increasing circles trying to keep the kite airborne. Kim made it to me at the same time that the kite made it to the ground.

This system was not going to work.

There is one stretch of road in this lot which was made by

who worked in this lot during the day. It was my new plan that Kim would hold onto the reel and run along the road. I would toss the kite into the air.

The first time it went up about ten feet, The first time it went up about ten feet, did a somersault. and dove gracefully to the ground. Kim was not a fast

The second time brought on one inovation I ran with the string in my hand (near the kite) and Kim ran ahead as before. Gradually I would catch up to Kim and the kite would get higher and higher until I finally let go.

"It's all yours, Kim!" I shouted joyfully. She stopped to look, The kite shuttered a little then became a dive bomber that couldn't come out of its dive. Well it was the best we could o. At least we go the darn thing airborne. "Shall we try again?" checked with my partner I had to ask? With the energy that kids have, only one try is not enough. Of course we shall try again!

About this time her mother came out to watch. She stood at the halfway point of our runway and watched.

This time I had the kite up and flying earlier than before and stopped to watch. Kim ran on knowing only that the kite was somewhere "up there". signalled her mother, with a wave of the hand, that this time the flight was a success. 'Oh, look at how high the kite is Kim!" she said. Kim stopped to look again. "She has to keep running in order to keep it up. "I tried to warn; but, on glancing up I saw what looked like a Stuka dive bomber coming at me. By shear luck and, thankfully quick reflexes the kite bounced off my arm instead of the top of my head.

Back to the drawing board! There was not much we could do. To keep it in the air we either had to run or get some wind. There was no wind to be found and a pair of thirty year old legs tire out more quickly than a comparetively new set of four year old ones. Happily 1 watched the sun go down. "Well, Kim I guess we have to go in now.

"Why?", she asked. (how I hate that question)

"Because the sun has gone down and we won't be able to run." I explained.

"Why?" she repeated.

"Because its too dark and someone could trip over a rock or stone and get hurt. I don't want to see that happen to you." To myself I was thinking she was not the one who was going to trip over the rock ... I was.

"Will we come out again?" she asked.

"Not tonight. Some other day, certainly.", I explained.

"I hope we have some wind then." she replied.

I thought to myself "Amen, Kim! amen to that!"
